

Dr. Arch. Eran Mordohovich

Technion University | ICOMOS Israel | Israel Antiquities Authority

Arch. Eran Mordohovich, Technion University | ICOMOS Israel | Israel Antiquities Authority

Eran Mordohovich is an Architect. He holds a M.Sc in Conservation from the RLIIC University of Leuven in Belgium (year, 2005).

Since 2010, he teaches architecture, urban design and Conservation at the Faculty of Architecture and Town Planning of Technion in Haifa. Since June 2021, he is an Associate Teaching Fellow at Technion in Haifa.

Since 2011, he is an ICOMOS member, member of the board NC ICOMOS Israel (year, 2015) and from 2018, he is the Chairman of the board of directors of ICOMOS Israel. He represents ICOMOS Israel in the Israeli World Heritage advisory committee.

He has a 26-year experience in professional practice as an architect, working on various architectural works, urban design and conservation projects in Israel and Belgium. Since 2011, he is involved into the planning of projects especially for the protection of archaeological remains at the conservation department of the Israeli Antiquities Authority.

Since 2017, he is the Northern Region Architect at the Israeli Antiquities Authority working on the management of various archaeological sites and serving as an advisor to the conservation programs developed for the site of Acre and Bet She'an.

He was a visiting lecturer in Italy (Politecnico Di Milano) and Belgium (St. Lukas Architecture School, Brussels).

Further, Eran Mordohovich is a fellow at Kedem - The National fellowship leadership program for heritage and cultural conservation leadership in Israel, Ben Gurion at the University of the Negev, Israel 2021 – 2023.